

Dear Marcia,as a senior my self I respect FINRA's intentions but believe the intentions would be better served if these rules were shortened and put into a language easily read by seniors and their families.Far too many rules and regulations can only be read by lawyers or accountants just like our entire US tax codes.

I believe an attempt should be made to shorten and simplify the language of these rules and amendments while maintaining your intentions of protecting seniors.

Bill Coughlin