(NASD[®]) rules; federal securities laws, rules, and regulations; and the rules of the Municipal Securities Rulemaking Board (MSRB). Firm Expelled, Individual Sanctioned

Lakeside Trading (CRD #39418, Metairie, Louisiana) and Thomas Griswold Russell (CRD #2669033, Registered Principal, Metairie, Louisiana) were fined $75,000, jointly and severally. The firm was suspended from association with any NASD member for 30 days for failing to file its audited financial statements and expelled from NASD membership for misuse of funds. Russell was fined an additional $137,961.95, suspended from association with any NASD member in any capacity for a total of 14 months and 40 business days, barred from association with any NASD member, and ordered to pay restitution totaling $316,005.48 to a member firm and a public customer. The fines and restitution are due and payable upon Russell's or the firm's re-entry into the securities industry. The sanctions are based on findings that Russell misused customer funds by improperly sharing in the profits in the customer's account. Russell also exercised discretion in the customer's account without a written agreement. The findings also stated that Russell guaranteed a customer against loss in margin calls, made misrepresentations to his clearing firm, and engaged in unauthorized trading in a customer's account. In addition, the firm, through Russell, failed to file an annual audited statement and failed to file a FOCUS report in a timely manner. Furthermore, the firm and Russell failed to file its Web Site with the NASD before its first use and failed to pre-file its revised Web Sites in a timely manner. Russell failed to ensure the firm's compliance with NASD's advertising rules and distributed misleading advertisements on its Web Sites. In addition, Kashner was required to attend a compliance conference with the NASD within 60 days from the date this decision becomes final. The sanctions were based on findings that the firm effected municipal securities trades without having those trades approved by a qualified municipal securities principal, and allowed Kashner to approve those trades when he was not qualified as a municipal securities principal. In addition, the firm sold shares of “hot issues” to potentially restricted accounts without inquiring into the beneficial ownership of the purchasers, and the firm and Kashner submitted inaccurate Free-Riding and Withholding questionnaires to the NASD for each of the “hot issues.” Furthermore, the firm placed orders to sell securities on behalf of its customers and accepted “long” sell orders and failed to make the required notations on the order tickets. The firm also effected sell transactions on behalf of its customers without noting on the order ticket whether the sale was long or short and effected principal transactions with its customers where the order tickets reflected the time the order was executed but failed to reflect the time the orders were received. (NASD Case #C07960095)

findings also stated that O'Brien misrepresented to the customers that their funds would be used to purchase property which would then be sold and the proceeds of the sale would be used to repay the customers when, in fact, the funds were used for his own benefit. The NASD determined that as a result of this misrepresentation, O'Brien received checks totaling $60,000 payable to him, negotiated and cashed the checks, and used the funds for purposes other than the customers' benefit. O'Brien also filed a Form U-4 with the NASD that failed to disclose a bankruptcy petition filed in Illinois. (NASD Case #C8A000016)

Seven Brokerage Firms Settle NASD Regulation Charges Of Yield Burning

NASD Regulation announced that it has censured seven brokerage firms for engaging in the practice of yield burning. Additionally, NASD Regulation ordered them to pay a total of $21.4 million to the U.S. Treasury, under an agreement with the Internal Revenue Service and the United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York, and to pay disgorgement directly to 38 municipal issuers. In settling the charges, the seven firms named in these actions, A.G. Edwards & Sons, Inc.; CS First Boston Corporation; J.C. Bradford & Co.; U.S. Bancorp Piper Jaffray, Inc.; Raymond James & Associates, Inc.; Southwest Securities, Inc.; and Wheat, First Securities, Inc., neither admitted nor denied NASD Regulation's findings.

NASD Regulation found that each firm had violated the NASD rule governing just and equitable principals of trade that requires members to observe high standards of commercial honor, as well as federal securities laws, by selling U.S. Treasury securities to municipalities at prices not reasonably related to the current wholesale market prices for those securities. NASD Regulation found that the excessive markups jeopardized the tax-exempt status of those municipalities' refunding bonds and diverted money from the U.S. Treasury to the firms in certain transactions and reduced the savings available to the municipalities from the refundings in other transactions.

In a falling interest rate environment, state and local governments often seek to reduce their borrowing costs by paying off outstanding bonds through the issuance of new bonds at lower interest rates. When the old bonds cannot be paid off until a future call date, the municipality can still take advantage of lower interest rates through an "advance refunding." In an advance refunding, the proceeds of the bond issuance are invested in U.S. Treasury securities, which are placed in an escrow account to pay the principal and interest obligations on the old bonds. Brokerage firms sell U.S. Treasury securities to municipalities for these escrow accounts. To prevent abuse of the benefit the federal government gives municipal issuers by not taxing interest on their bonds, federal law limits the yield an issuer can earn on Treasury securities bought for advance refundings. The practice known as "yield burning" occurs when a brokerage firm charges excessive markups on the sale of U.S. Treasury securities to municipalities for refundings to reduce the yield on those securities so they do not violate the yield restrictions. If yield burning occurs, holders of the new refunding bonds can be required to pay federal income tax on the bond interest they receive.

The cases are the result of extensive NASD Regulation examinations conducted over a three-year period coordinated with the Securities and Exchange Commission, which announced similar settlements with an additional 10 firms. The examinations were conducted by NASD Regulation Offices in New Orleans, Dallas, and New York, and with the Department of Enforcement. The disciplinary actions were filed by the District Office in New Orleans.

Each firm was censured and ordered to make payments to the U.S. Treasury, under an agreement with the Internal Revenue Service and the United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York, and to pay disgorgement directly to 38 municipal issuers, if required as a part of the settlement.

NASD Regulation Charges Millennium Securities and Execs with Fraudulent Trading Activity Following IPO

NASD Regulation announced that it has filed a complaint charging Millennium Securities Corporation, New York, New York, its Chief Executive Officer, Richard A. Sitomer; and its President, Todd M. Rome with the unlawful distribution and fraudulent after-market trading of an initial public offering (IPO) of common stock and warrants in December of 1996. NASD

Regulation alleges that the firm and individuals made over $5 million in illegal profits as a result of their violations of the federal securities laws and NASD rules.

As co-underwriter of the IPO, Millennium sold about 52 percent of its allocation of Translation Group, Ltd.'s common stock and about 80 percent of its allocation of warrants to a select group of Sitomer's and Rome's retail customers. Within 90 seconds of the commencement of aftermarket trading, the complaint alleges that Sitomer and Rome repurchased all of the IPO common stock and warrants that had been sold to these customers. As a result of these repurchases, Millennium amassed a substantial inventory position of shares and warrants – nearly all the trading activity of Translation Group securities at that time. Thereafter, the firm actively participated in increasing the quotes in the common stock and warrants, sharply driving up their price.

NASD Regulation's complaint states that within 13 minutes of repurchasing the stock and warrants, Millennium began selling them to retail investors at a significantly higher price. To encourage the sale of these securities, the complaint also alleges that Millennium paid the sales force greater than average compensation. The NASD investigation found that Millennium made a profit of approximately $5 million from this activity, 40 percent more than the total net proceeds of the IPO.

The complaint also asserts that Millennium, Sitomer and Rome, committed fraud by failing to disclose material facts to customers relating to the sale of Translation securities in the immediate aftermarket. Sitomer and Rome did not tell customers the source and amount of the securities being distributed; or that new buyers would pay significantly more than what Millennium had paid to re-acquire the same securities. Customers also were not told that the sales force received higher than normal compensation.

Translation Group Ltd. was not charged in the complaint, and there are no allegations that it engaged in any wrongdoing.

The issuance of a disciplinary complaint represents the initiation of a formal proceeding by the NASD in which findings as to the allegations in the complaint have not been made and does not represent a decision as to any of the allegations contained in the complaint. Because this complaint is unadjudicated, the respondents should be contacted before drawing any conclusion regarding the allegations in the complaint.

NASD Regulation Censures And Fines E*TRADE Securities

NASD Regulation announced that it has censured and fined E*TRADE Securities, Inc., of Menlo Park, CA, $20,000 for failing to promptly respond to NASD Regulation requests for information relating to customer complaints.

In a three-month period, from April 1999 to June 1999, NASD Regulation made 17 separate requests for information relating to customer complaints that it had received about the firm, and in each instance E*TRADE failed to provide further information or respond in a timely fashion.

One result of E*TRADE's tremendous account growth, 550 percent from third quarter 1997 to third quarter 1999, according to the firm, has been the challenge of handling the needs and requests of such a large number of customers.

"Prompt response to regulators' inquiries about customer complaints has to be front and center for all firms," said Barry R. Goldsmith, Executive Vice President of Enforcement at NASD Regulation. "Brokerage firms need to devote the resources that are necessary to handle all aspects of their securities business."
