

As an investor in both mutual funds and individual stocks, I find this proposal a potentially dangerous invasion of privacy. If the security companies or individual companies were simply asked for statistical information without identification of individual holders/brokers, perhaps that would meet the government's desire for that information, with appropriate audits to ensure reliability of data. Please do not add this new expansion of it's database to the federal government's ongoing accumulation of power (information = power!).

G.T. Stafford
Colorado